THE ELAINE KAPLAN MEMORIAL FUND SERIES LECTURE

Americans and the Holocaust

Northwestern University history professor Daniel Greene recently curated an exhibition on Americans' response to the Holocaust for the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum in Washington, D.C. The exhibition examines what Americans knew about the persecution and murder of European Jews as it occurred, and it prompts visitors to think about Americans' responsibilities to refugees and persecuted peoples abroad. Greene will lead a discussion about the exhibition and the difficult questions it seeks to raise.

Wednesday, July 17, 10:30 a.m.
